“I am always inspired by nature, real floral arrangements, landscapes and personalities”.

I began using different palettes early in my career, when I was training to be an illustrator. I became comfortable using oil paints, watercolor, gouache, acrylic, charcoal, lead and colored pencils, among other mediums. Though I am now primarily a painter, I still experiment in using various mediums to express myself creatively.

This June, at the Cresskill Public Library, I will be exhibiting watercolors, oils paintings and drawings in mixed media. As I grow as an artist, I feel more at ease changing between different palettes. This exhibition holds special meaning for me because it marks the 40th anniversary of my arrival to the United States from my homeland, Cuba.
